Voyage de Nuit

© The Herald

This is another one of those damn clever and often unmissable Tune-Up tours established by Nod Knowles when he was music boss at the Scottish Arts Council and enthusiastically continued by his successor Ian Smith.

After these dates it has another 15 across the nation, including remote corners of the Highlands and Islands, but also Edinburgh and Glasgow, where it is part of the West End Festival.

The mix this time is Scottish-based flautist and vocalist Nuala Kennedy with the leader of French flamenco-jazz group Azulejos, Philippe Guidat, on guitar, Scotland-domiciled Brazilian bassist Mario Caribe, Bolivian percussionist Diego Landivar and English accordianist Luke Daniels.

Music from the recent Azulejos album, La Fontaine Des Vignes, which features a guest appearance by Kennedy, will feature and she and Guidat have also written new material especially for Voyage de Nuit.
